28UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA
OAKLAND DIVISION

MICHAEL ROBERT HISCOX,

No. C 09-3477 PJH (PR)

Petitioner,

ORDER DENYING PETITION FOR WRIT OF HABEAS
CORPUS AND GRANTING CERTIFICATE OF

vs.

MIKE MARTEL, Warden,

Respondent.

This is a habeas corpus case filed pro se by a state prisoner pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §

2254. The court ordered respondent to show cause why the writ should not be granted.

Respondent filed an answer and a memorandum of points and authorities in support of it, and lodged exhibits with the court. Petitioner responded with a traverse. For the reasons set out below, the petition is denied.

BACKGROUND

On November 19, 2003, a jury found petitioner guilty on eleven counts of lewd and lascivious conduct, see Cal. Penal Code § 288(a). For each count the jury found true the allegations that the victim was under age 14 and that petitioner had substantial sexual conduct with the victim, see Cal. Penal Code § 1203.066 (8), and that petitioner committed the offenses against multiple victims, see Cal. Penal Code § 667.61(b)(c)(7) and (e)(5). Respondent's Exhibit ("Resp. Exh.") A2 at 565-576, 582-586. On January 12, 2004, the court sentenced petitioner to a total term of 165 years to life in prison, consisting of consecutive terms of 15 years to life on each count. Resp. Exh. A3 at 746-47, 751-53. On January 31, 2006, the California Court of Appeal affirmed the conviction but remanded for resentencing. Resp. Exh. F. A petition for review was denied by the California Supreme

1 Court on May 17, 2006, but before the California Supreme Court acted on the petition for 2 review, the superior court resentenced petitioner to a total term of 28 years. Resp. Exh. H 3 (Exhibit A).

4 On June 8, 2007, petitioner filed a habeas petition that was granted by the California 5 Court of Appeal,¹ and the case was remanded to the superior court for resentencing. Id. at 6 2. On October 25, 2007, the superior court again resentenced petitioner to a total term of 7 28 years, consisting of the aggravated term of eight years on count one, followed by two 8 years consecutive on each of the remaining ten counts. Resp. Exh. B3 at 60. On August 9 12, 2008, the Court of Appeal affirmed the judgment. Resp. Exh. O (appendix), People v.
10 Hiscox, 2008 WL 3414964 (Cal. App. 1 Dist.). The California Supreme Court denied a 11 petition for review on October 22, 2008. Resp. Exh. P. Petitioner filed a habeas corpus 12 petition in the California Court of Appeal that was summarily denied on February 13, 2009, 13 and a petition for review was summarily denied by the California Supreme Court on April 14 22, 2009. Resp. Exh. Q (Appendix), R.

15 The relevant facts, as described by the California Court of Appeal, can be 16 summarized as follows: Hiscox was convicted for sexually molesting three children over 17 the course of several years from 1992 through 1996. Resp. Exh. O at 1. The molestations 18 occurred while Hiscox was living with the children and their mother and acting as a father 19 figure for the children. Id. Hiscox was originally sentenced to serve a total term of 165
20 years in prison, but the case was remanded for resentencing under the law as it existed 21 prior to November 30, 1994. Id. at 2. The trial court resentenced Hiscox while a petition for 22 review was pending in the California Supreme Court. Id. The petition for review was 23 denied but, because the trial court resentenced Hiscox before it had regained jurisdiction of 24 the case, a habeas petition was granted by the Court of Appeal and the case was again 25 remanded to the trial court for resentencing. Id. On the second resentencing, Hiscox was 26 sentenced to a total term of 28 years, consisting of the aggravated term of eight years on

27
28 ¹The petition was granted because the superior court resentenced petitioner before it had regained jurisdiction of the case.

1 count one, followed by consecutive two-year terms on the remaining counts. Id. The trial 2 court found that the aggravated term was appropriate on count one because Hiscox 3 assumed a fatherly role with the three victims and violated their trust and the trust of their 4 mother in gaining access to the victims. Id. at 3. The court found that two years, which 5 was one-third the midterm of six years, to be served consecutively, was appropriate for the 6 remaining counts. Id. The court acknowledged that Hiscox's lack of a prior criminal record 7 was a mitigating factor, but that the aggravating factor regarding his violation of trust after 8 assuming a fatherly role with the victims, outweighed the mitigating factor. Id.

STANDARD OF REVIEW

10 A district court may not grant a petition challenging a state conviction or sentence on 11 the basis of a claim that was reviewed on the merits in state court unless the state court's 12 adjudication of the claim: "(1) resulted in a decision that was contrary to, or involved an 13 unreasonable application of, clearly established Federal law, as determined by the 14 Supreme Court of the United States; or (2) resulted in a decision that was based on an 15 unreasonable determination of the facts in light of the evidence presented in the State court 16 proceeding." 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d). The first prong applies both to questions of law and to 17 mixed questions of law and fact, see Williams (Terry) v. Taylor, 529 U.S. 362, 407-09 18 (2000), while the second prong applies to decisions based on factual determinations, See 19 Miller-El v. Cockrell, 537 U.S. 322, 340 (2003).

20 A state court decision is "contrary to" Supreme Court authority, that is, falls under the 21 first clause of § 2254(d)(1), only if "the state court arrives at a conclusion opposite to that 22 reached by [the Supreme] Court on a question of law or if the state court decides a case 23 differently than [the Supreme] Court has on a set of materially indistinguishable facts." 24 Williams (Terry), 529 U.S. at 412-13. A state court decision is an "unreasonable application 25 of" Supreme Court authority, falling under the second clause of § 2254(d)(1), if it correctly 26 identifies the governing legal principle from the Supreme Court's decisions but 27 "unreasonably applies that principle to the facts of the prisoner's case." Id. at 413. The 28 federal court on habeas review may not issue the writ "simply because that court concludes

1 in its independent judgment that the relevant state-court decision applied clearly 2 established federal law erroneously or incorrectly.” Id. at 411. Rather, the application must 3 be “objectively unreasonable” to support granting the writ. Id. at 409.

4 Under 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(2), a state court decision “based on a factual 5 determination will not be overturned on factual grounds unless objectively unreasonable in 6 light of the evidence presented in the state-court proceeding.” See Miller-El, 537 U.S. at 7 340; see also Torres v. Prunty, 223 F.3d 1103, 1107 (9th Cir. 2000).

8 When there is no reasoned opinion from the highest state court to consider the 9 petitioner’s claims, the court looks to the last reasoned opinion. See Ylst v. Nunnemaker, 10 501 U.S. 797, 801-06 (1991); Shackleford v. Hubbard, 234 F.3d 1072, 1079, n. 2 (9th Cir.
11 2000). However, when presented with a state court decision that is unaccompanied by a 12 rationale for its conclusions, a federal court must conduct an independent review of the 13 record to determine whether the state-court decision is objectively unreasonable. See 14 Delgado v. Lewis, 223 F.3d 976, 982 (9th Cir. 2000). This review is not a “de novo review 15 of the constitutional issue;” rather, it is the only way a federal court can determine whether 16 a state-court decision is objectively unreasonable where the state court is silent. See 17 Himes v. Thompson, 336 F.3d 848, 853 (9th Cir. 2003). “[W]here a state court’s decision is 18 unaccompanied by an explanation, the habeas petitioner’s burden still must be met by 19 showing there was no reasonable basis for the state court to deny relief.” See Harrington v.
20 Richter, 131 S. Ct. 770, 784 (2011).

21 DISCUSSION

22 As grounds for federal habeas relief, petitioner asserts that: (1) his due process 23 rights were violated by admission of a confession obtained through coercion and promises 24 of leniency; (2) his due process rights were violated when the trial court failed to allow 25 testimony on the voluntariness of the confession; (3) the confession was not properly 26 authenticated; (4) hearsay evidence was improperly admitted; (5) his arrest was improper; 27 (6) the prosecutor committed misconduct; (7) the sentence imposed violated Cunningham 28 v. California, 549 U.S. 270, 293-94 (2007); (8) his trial counsel was ineffective; and (9) his

1 appellate counsel was ineffective. Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus ("Hab. Pet.") 6a-6d.
2 The court dismissed claims (3) and (4) because both are state law claims and cannot form
3 the basis for federal habeas relief, see Estelle v. McGuire, 502 U.S. 62, 67-68 (1991) 4 (federal habeas unavailable for violations of state law or for alleged error in the 5 interpretation or application of state law); and claim (5) because violations of the Fourth 6 Amendment cannot be grounds for relief in a habeas proceeding. See Stone v. Powell, 7 428 U.S. 465, 481-82, 494 (1976) (no federal habeas review of Fourth Amendment claims 8 unless state did not provide opportunity for full and fair litigation of those claims).
9 Petitioner's remaining claims will be addressed on the merits.

10 I. Confession/Evidentiary Hearing

11 a. Confession

12 Petitioner claims that a confession he made during a pretext call with Theresa C.
13 was improperly admitted because it resulted from promises of leniency. Hab. Pet. 1. The 14 Court of Appeal summarized the telephone conversation as follows:

15 During the investigation of the crimes, Deputy Diana Freese asked 16 Theresa C. to come to the sheriff's office and make a "pretext call" to 17 Hiscox. The call was placed from Freese's office, and tape recorded, for 18 the purpose of obtaining incriminating statements from Hiscox.

19 Theresa C. began by asking Hiscox about her three sons' report that he 20 had molested them. She was particularly concerned about C., who was 21 having psychological problems, and asked Hiscox to tell her specifically 22 what he had done. After several denials, Hiscox said "I don't know what I 23 can even talk to you about. Law Enforcement's already contacted me.
24 They're investigating me." Hiscox remained noncommittal, and Theresa 25 C. said, referring to C.: "Give me a f—ing break. He's embarrassed. He's 26 humiliated. He feels like he's gonna be called a fagot (sic). I mean, 27 Jesus Christ, you're their dad. It's time to f—ing pull it together and help 28 them, you know, get over it. Screw Law Enforcement. We need to get this...I need my kids ok." Hiscox said, "I can't help them if they throw me in jail." Theresa C. replied: "Well, they're not gonna throw you in jail if you help them. F—them. We'll just get them out of the picture. I just need him to go to...I just need...I just need [C.] to be ok."

29 Hiscox remained reluctant. Theresa C. said: "It's just us. I don't want 30 Social Services or anybody else in my life. I just want [C.] not to kill 31 himself, ok." Hiscox commented, "I need not to go to jail, so I can help."
32 A little later, the following exchange occurred:

33 "[Theresa C.] Well, they [the boys] haven't said anything yet. They 34 don't have an appointment yet."

1 "H[iscox] They haven't said anything to who yet? They 2 told...They called the Sheriff."

3 " [Theresa C.] They talked to a Detective, which is an initial report.
4 They haven't done...There's like, I guess, there's something called a 5 CAST screening or something. And they haven't done that yet. I haven't 6 talked to the Detective to make the determination. I haven't been home 7 yet."

8 "H[iscox] Mm hmm."

9 " [Theresa C.] ...enough...Nobody's gonna do anything unless I 10 want them to. And alls I want is for [C.] to be ok and for [D.] to be ok. I 11 know the Detective got called. I talked to him."

12 Eventually, Hiscox began making admissions. He remained suspicious, 13 however, saying at one point "Theresa, I don't know if you're calling me 14 from the Police Station. I don't know anything." He also told Theresa C., 15 "Theresa, everything I'm telling you, can send me to prison forever."
16 Toward the end of the conversation, there was this exchange:

17 "H[iscox] Alls I know is I've told you now and you're gonna 18 send me to jail with it. And I'm really sorry and I want to help [C.], but I 19 don't know what to do."

20 " [Theresa C.] Well...Oh, God."

21 "H[iscox] But it's all I can do to help you is to tell you so I did."

22 Resp. Exh. F 3-4. (footnotes omitted).

23 On direct appeal petitioner argued that the trial court erred by granting the 24 prosecution's motion to admit the tape of the phone call into evidence and denying his 25 motion to suppress the evidence. Id. at 4. The Court of Appeal concluded that the 26 statements were properly admitted, finding that Hiscox was not motivated to confess by an 27 implied promise of leniency made by Theresa C., but rather by a desire to help her and her 28 sons deal with the problems caused by his actions. Id. at 4-5. The court determined that Hiscox knew that his statements exposed him to imprisonment, as he expressed concern about the penal consequences of his admissions before, during, and after he made the statements. Id. at 5. Under the circumstances, the Court of Appeal concluded that Hiscox's decision to confess was made voluntarily and was not coerced by an implied promise of leniency. Id.

29 To be admissible, a confession must be "free and voluntary: that is, must not be 30

1 extracted by any sort of threats or violence, nor obtained by any direct or implied promises, 2 however slight, nor by the exertion of any improper influence." See Brady v. United States, 3 397 U.S. 742, 753 (1970) (citation omitted). A court on direct review is required to 4 determine, in light of the totality of the circumstances, "whether a confession [was] made 5 freely, voluntarily and without compulsion or inducement of any sort." See Withrow v.
6 Williams, 507 U.S. 680, 689 (1993). (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

7 In cases involving psychological coercion, the question is whether, in light of the 8 totality of the circumstances, the defendant's will was overborne when he or she confessed.
9 See Ortiz v. Uribe, 671 F.3d 863, 869 (9th Circuit 2011). The interrogation techniques of 10 the officer must shock the conscience so as to warrant a federal intrusion into the criminal 11 processes of the States. See Moran v. Burbine, 475 U.S. 412, 433–34 (1986). Coercive 12 police activity is a necessary predicate to finding that a confession is involuntary within the 13 meaning of the Due Process Clause, and the state of mind of the police is irrelevant when 14 making this determination. See Colorado v. Connelly, 479 U.S. 157, 167 (1986); Moran, 15 475 U.S. at 423. However, police deception alone does not render a confession 16 involuntary. See United States v. Miller, 984 F.2d 1028, 1031 (9th Cir. 1993).

17 Petitioner contends that the confession made during the pretext call with Theresa C.
18 was involuntary because it was induced by promises of leniency and by warnings that her 19 son would inflict harm upon himself and petitioner if he did not comply with her demands for 20 information. Hab. Pet. 5-8.

21 Assuming arguendo that Theresa C. was acting as an agent of law enforcement 22 throughout the phone conversation, the totality of the circumstances indicate that 23 petitioner's will was not overborne when he confessed to the crimes. Theresa C. described 24 in great detail the pain that she and the boys were going through, and implored petitioner to 25 tell her what he had done so that she would at least know the source of their suffering.
26 Resp. Exh. A1 at 2-6. Although petitioner was reluctant to speak due to the criminal 27 investigation, he eventually succumbed to Theresa C.'s pleas for help, and admitted to 28 sexually molesting her boys on numerous occasions. It's clear that petitioner was moved

1 by her entreaties, even while being aware of the risk he was exposing himself to. Id. at 19.
2 Theresa C.'s so-called promises of leniency amounted to nothing more than proclamations 3 of how little she cared about the criminal investigation as compared to the well-being of her 4 children. Id. at 5-7. Although Theresa C. was acting in concert with the Sheriff's 5 Department, her statements and tone were that of a concerned mother, and not of a law 6 enforcement officer trying to overcome the will of the defendant through coercive or 7 deceptive means. It is clear from the record that petitioner's admissions arose out 8 of his desire to help Theresa C. and the children in whatever small way that he could, and 9 were not coerced by insincere promises of leniency or fabricated warnings of harm that 10 could befall the boys. In view of Theresa C.'s motives and her concern regarding the 11 effects of the abuse that the victims suffered at the hands of petitioner, the manner in which 12 she extracted information hardly "shocks the conscience" of this court. See Moran, 475
13 U.S. at 433-34. Petitioner fails to show that there was no reasonable basis for the state 14 court to deny relief. See Harrington, 131 S. Ct. at 784.

15 The California Court of Appeal's determination that petitioner's confession was 16 properly admitted was not contrary to, or an unreasonable application of, clearly 17 established federal law, or based on an unreasonable determination of the facts in light of 18 the state court record. See 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d).

19 b. Evidentiary Hearing

20 Petitioner contends that the trial court improperly denied his request for a testimonial 21 hearing to determine the admissibility of his confession. Hab. Pet. 15. The facts 22 surrounding this claim are as follows: A pretrial in limine hearing was held to address the 23 prosecution's motion to admit petitioner's confession and the defense motion to suppress 24 the same. Resp. Exh. B1 at 27-36. Based on its review of the parties' points and 25 authorities and an audiotape of the phone call, the court announced a tentative decision to 26 admit the confession. Id. at 27. Defense counsel argued that the court could not make an 27 informed decision on the tape's admissibility without allowing him to cross-examine 28 Theresa C. and Deputy Freese regarding the planning, training, and instructions involved in

1 preparing for the phone call. Id. at 27-35. Counsel tried to make the point that, because 2 Theresa C. acted as a government agent, she may have made improper threats or offers 3 that rendered the confession inadmissible. Id. The prosecution argued that the statements 4 were made voluntarily and as a result of the defendant's own conscience. Id. at 35-36.
5 The defendant was not in custody and made his confession at the end of a phone call 6 which he could have terminated at any time. Id. at 35. Theresa C. made no threats or 7 promises, and the defendant had no reason to believe that she had any legal authority over 8 him. Id. In fact, defendant repeatedly acknowledged that he could go to jail for his 9 statements depending on what she decided to do with the information. Id. After hearing the 10 arguments, the court found that, under the totality of the circumstances, the taped 11 statement was voluntary and admissible, and granted the prosecution's motion to admit the 12 confession and denied the defense motion to suppress the same. Id. at 36.

13 After the trial began, defense counsel renewed his objection to the admission of the 14 confession and requested a hearing pursuant to California Evidence Code § 402 to 15 determine whether Theresa C. made an offer of leniency to the defendant that rendered his 16 confession involuntary. Resp. Exh. B1 at 170-73. The court made it clear that it had 17 already reviewed the tape and the points and authorities submitted by the parties, and 18 would not be swayed by any further testimony. Id. at 173-74. Defense counsel argued that 19 Theresa C. clearly made an offer that induced petitioner's incriminating statements. Id. at 20 175-76. The court rejected the argument, finding that the statements were made voluntarily 21 under the totality of the circumstances, and denied the request for a § 402 hearing. Id. at 22 176-77.

23 A defendant is constitutionally entitled to have the trial court determine whether a 24 confession was freely and voluntarily given, and the trial judge's conclusion that the 25 confession is voluntary must appear from the record with unmistakable clarity. See Sims v.
26 Georgia, 385 U.S. 538, 543-44 (1967) citing Jackson v. Denno, 378 U.S. 368, 391-94 27 (1964).

28 Petitioner claims that the trial court's denial of his request for a testimonial hearing

1 prevented him from eliciting the material facts necessary for the court to make a proper 2 determination on whether his confession was voluntary. Hab. Pet. 17-19. This contention 3 lacks merit. Clearly established Supreme Court authority requires the trial court to 4 determine that the confession was freely and voluntarily given, and that its conclusion in 5 this regard appear from the record with unmistakable clarity. See Sims, 385 U.S. at 544.
6 This is precisely what happened here. After hearing argument, reviewing the audiotape 7 and considering the parties' points and authorities, the trial court made it clear that it had all 8 the facts necessary to determine that petitioner's statements were made voluntarily, and 9 that there was no need for additional testimony. Resp. Exh. B at 36, 173-74, 176-77.
10 Nothing more was required.

11 The trial court's determination that a testimonial hearing was not necessary was not 12 contrary to, or an unreasonable application of, clearly established federal law, or based on 13 an unreasonable determination of the facts in light of the state court proceedings. See 28 14 U.S.C. § 2254(d).

15 II. Prosecutorial Misconduct

16 Petitioner claims that the prosecutor committed misconduct by offering false 17 evidence, perjuring herself, suborning perjury, and misleading the court and defense 18 counsel. Hab. Pet. 49. The substance of petitioner's claim is that the prosecutor and 19 Deputy Freese did not truthfully identify the audiotape of the pretext call as accurate, and 20 they colluded to offer the false evidence as genuine without disclosing that information to 21 the court or to defense counsel. Hab. Pet. 52.

22 A conviction obtained through the use of testimony which the prosecutor knows or 23 should know is perjured must be set aside if there is any reasonable likelihood that the 24 testimony could have affected the judgment of the jury. See United States v. Agurs, 427
25 U.S. 97, 103 (1976). The result is the same when the prosecutor, although not soliciting 26 false evidence, allows it to go uncorrected when it appears. See Napue v. Illinois, 360 U.S.
27 264, 269 (1959). To prevail on a claim based on Agurs/Napue, the petitioner must show 28 that (1) the testimony (or evidence) was actually false, (2) the prosecution knew or should

1 have known that the testimony was actually false, and (3) that the false testimony was 2 material. See United States v. Zuno-Arce, 339 F.3d 886, 889 (9th Cir. 2003) (citation 3 omitted). In evaluating allegations of prosecutorial misconduct, this court considers 4 whether the prosecution's actions "so infected the trial with unfairness as to make the 5 resulting conviction a denial of due process." See Hein v. Sullivan, 601 F.3d 897, 912 (9th
6 Cir. 2010). (citation omitted). The court must conduct an independent review of the record 7 to determine whether the California Supreme Court's decision denying relief on this claim is 8 objectively unreasonable. See Delgado, 223 F.3d at 982.

9 Petitioner's claim of falsity relies on the fact that the conversation was interrupted 10 due to the tape being turned over, leaving a small portion of the conversation that was not 11 recorded or transcribed. Petitioner's Traverse ("Pet. Trav.") at 46. Petitioner argues that 12 the prosecution, knowing of the interruption, sought to admit the tape as the "entire pretext 13 call with no deletions," thereby offering false evidence and also suborning perjury of their 14 witness, Deputy Freese, who testified under oath as to the contents of the recording. Id.
15 Petitioner's claim lacks merit as there is no showing that the prosecution deliberately 16 presented false evidence, or that anything material was omitted from the tape. Side one of 17 the tape ends in the middle of a statement from Theresa C. that she needs to know what 18 happened to her kids. Resp. Exh. A1 at 18. The tape picks up on side 2 with Theresa C.
19 stating that she is going to believe her children. Id. All parties were aware of the reason for 20 the interruption, and there is no indication that the portion of the conversation that was not 21 recorded concerned whether petitioner's admissions were voluntary and reliable. Id.
22 Petitioner's Napue claim therefore fails on the first prong as there was no false testimony 23 concerning the authenticity of the tape or its contents and, in any case, there is no 24 indication that the portion of the testimony that was not recorded had any material bearing 25 on an issue in dispute.

26 Based on the court's independent review of the record, the state courts' decision 27 denying petitioner's claim for relief is not objectively unreasonable. See Delgado, 223 F.3d 28 at 982.

1 III. Cunningham Claim

2 Petitioner claims that the trial court's imposition of an upper term sentence on count 3 one violated Cunningham v. California, 549 U.S. 270, 274, 288-290 (2007) because it was 4 based on a factor not admitted to by him or found by a jury. Hab. Pet. 56. The jury found 5 petitioner guilty on eleven counts of lewd and lascivious conduct in violation of California 6 Penal Code § 288(a). At the second resentencing, the court found that the aggravated 7 term of eight years was appropriate on count one, based on the fact that the defendant 8 assumed a fatherly role with the three victims and violated their trust to commit the offense.
9 Resp. Exh. B3 at 60. The Court of Appeal affirmed the sentence, finding that the trial court 10 properly imposed the aggravated term under California's revised sentencing statute. Resp.
11 Exh. O at 4.

12 In Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466, 490 (2000), the Supreme Court held that 13 any fact that increases the penalty for a crime beyond the prescribed statutory maximum 14 must be submitted to a jury and proved beyond a reasonable doubt. In Blakely v.
15 Washington, 542 U.S. 296, 303 (2004), the Supreme Court explained that "the 'statutory 16 maximum' for Apprendi purposes is the maximum sentence a judge may impose solely on 17 the basis of the facts reflected in the jury verdict or admitted by the defendant." Id.
18 (emphasis in original). Therefore "the middle term prescribed in California's statutes, not 19 the upper term, is the relevant statutory maximum." See Cunningham v. California, 549 20 U.S. 270, 288-89 (2007). In Cunningham, the Supreme Court, citing Apprendi and Blakely, 21 held that California's Determinate Sentencing Law violates a defendant's right to a jury trial 22 to the extent that it contravenes "Apprendi's bright-line rule: Except for a prior conviction, 23 'any fact that increases the penalty for a crime beyond the prescribed statutory maximum 24 must be submitted to a jury, and proved beyond a reasonable doubt.'" See id. quoting 25 Apprendi, 530 U.S. at 490.

26 The trial court's imposition of an upper term sentence on count one, based on facts 27 found by the judge rather than the jury, constituted error under Cunningham, 549 U.S. at 28 288-89. However, failure to submit a sentencing factor to a jury is subject to harmless error

1 analysis. See Butler v. Curry, 528 F. 3d 624, 648 (9th Cir. 2008). In federal habeas 2 proceedings, the court must determine whether the error had a substantial and injurious 3 effect on petitioner's sentence under the standard set forth in Brecht v. Abrahamson, 507 4 U.S. 619 (1993). See Hoffman v. Arave, 236 F.3d 523, 540 (9th Cir. 2001). Applying this 5 standard the court must grant relief if there is "grave doubt" as to whether a jury would have 6 found the relevant aggravating factors beyond a reasonable doubt. See O'Neal v.
7 McAninch, 513 U.S. 432, 434, 445 (1995). Grave doubt exists when, "in the judge's mind, 8 the matter is so evenly balanced that he feels himself in virtual equipoise as to the 9 harmlessness of the error." Id. at 434.

10 At sentencing, the trial court heard argument from counsel and testimony from 11 petitioner, his brother, and Theresa C. Resp. Exh. B2 at 417-448. The court was 12 presented with extensive evidence that the victims endured ongoing and repeated 13 instances of sexual abuse at the hands of petitioner. Id. at 448. It was uncontested that 14 petitioner acted as a surrogate father for the three victims in that he provided significant 15 financial support for the victims and their mother, and the trial court concluded that 16 petitioner abused their trust in "one of the worst ways imaginable." Id. at 456. Based on 17 the evidence that was presented at trial and at the sentencing hearing, the Cunningham 18 error is harmless because there is virtually no doubt, let alone grave doubt, that a jury 19 would have concluded beyond a reasonable doubt that petitioner abused a position of trust 20 with respect to the three victims. See Butler, 528 F.3d at 643, 648–49.

21 IV. Ineffective Assistance of Counsel

22 Petitioner contends that his trial counsel was ineffective at sentencing for (i) failing to 23 draw the court's attention to its prior findings of mitigating factors; (ii) failing to insist that the 24 court state its reasons for imposing consecutive terms; and (iii) failing to object to the 25 court's finding that petitioner had the ability to pay fines and restitution. Hab. Pet. at 65.
26 Petitioner also contends that trial counsel was ineffective at both the preliminary hearing and 27 the trial for failing to object to the admission of the pretext call. Hab. Pet. 24. He finally 28 contends that his appellate counsel was ineffective for failing adequately to raise the 1 foregoing issues on appeal. Hab. Pet. 19, 24, 32, 45.

2 In order to succeed on an ineffective assistance of counsel claim, the petitioner must 3 satisfy the two-pronged test set forth in Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668, 687
4 (1984), which requires him to show deficient performance and prejudice. Deficient 5 performance requires a showing that trial counsel's representation fell below an objective 6 standard of reasonableness as measured by prevailing professional norms. See Wiggins
7 v. Smith, 539 U.S. 510, 521 (2003). To establish prejudice, petitioner must show a 8 reasonable probability that "but for counsel's unprofessional errors, the result of the 9 proceeding would have been different." See Strickland, 466 U.S. at 694. If a petitioner 10 cannot establish that defense counsel's performance was deficient, it is unnecessary for a 11 federal court considering a habeas ineffective assistance claim to address the prejudice 12 prong of the Strickland test. See Siripongs v. Calderon, 133 F.3d 732, 737 (9th Cir. 1998).
13 Again, because the California Supreme Court summarily denied the petition with no 14 explanation, this court must conduct an independent review of the record to determine 15 whether its decision denying petitioner's claim of ineffective assistance of counsel is 16 objectively unreasonable. See Delgado, 223 F.3d at 982.

17 a. Sentencing

18 At the original sentencing hearing the defense submitted a "statement in mitigation 19 and sentencing with proposed sentencing alternatives." Resp. Exh. B2 at 456. The court 20 considered the statement, and also noted that petitioner had led a productive life and that 21 numerous letters of support were submitted on his behalf. Id. at 456-57. The court 22 sentenced petitioner to eleven consecutive terms of fifteen years to life, and ordered him to 23 pay a restitution fine of $10,000, while suspending payment on an identical restitution fine.
24 Id. at 457. At the second resentencing, the court began by announcing a tentative decision 25 to sentence petitioner to a total term of 28 years. Resp. Exh. B3 at 55. The court went on 26 to find that petitioner's lack of a prior record was a mitigating factor, but determined that the 27 aggravating factors outweighed the mitigating ones. Resp. Exh. B3 at 57, 60. The court 28 sentenced petitioner to a total term of 28 years, consisting of 8 years on count one,

1 followed by consecutive term of 2 years on each of the remaining ten counts, and reduced 2 his restitution fine from $10,000 to $5,000. Id. at 60-61.

3 Petitioner claims that counsel was ineffective for not raising the prior mitigating 4 factors relied on by the trial court at the original sentencing proceeding, and for failing to 5 produce an updated pleading in mitigation. Hab. Pet. 68. Petitioner's claim lacks merit as 6 the record reflects that the court was aware of the mitigating factors in the case, but simply 7 concluded that the aggravating factors outweighed the mitigating ones. Resp. Exh. B3 at 8 57, 60. However, even assuming that counsel's failure to highlight the mitigating factors for 9 the court's benefit constitutes deficient performance, petitioner fails to show a reasonable 10 probability that the result of the proceeding would have been different had he done so. See 11 Strickland, 466 U.S. at 694. Considering the facts of this case, particularly the original 12 sentence imposed, it is highly unlikely, let alone reasonably probable, that petitioner would 13 have received a more favorable result had counsel produced an updated pleading that 14 refreshed the court's recollection regarding the mitigating factors it relied on at the original 15 sentencing.

16 Petitioner also contends that counsel was ineffective for failing to request that the 17 court state its reasons for imposing consecutive sentences. Hab. Pet. 72. The trial court 18 did not abuse its discretion by imposing consecutive sentences. See Cal. Rules of Court, 19 Rule 4.425. In any case, petitioner fails to demonstrate a reasonable possibility of a better 20 result had his counsel requested a statement of reasons justifying the imposition of 21 consecutive sentences. See Strickland, 466 U.S. at 694.

22 Petitioner's claim regarding trial counsel's failure to object to restitution does not 23 constitute deficient performance because California law requires the court to impose a 24 restitution fine unless it finds a compelling and extraordinary reason not to do so. See Cal.
25 Penal Code § 1202.4(b). A defendant's inability to pay is not a compelling and 26 extraordinary reason not to impose a restitution fine. Id. "Failure to raise a meritless 27 argument does not constitute ineffective assistance." See Moormann v. Ryan, 628 F.3d 28 1102, 1109-10 (9th Cir. 2010) quoting Boag v. Raines, 769 F.2d 1341, 1344 (9th Cir. 1985).

b. Preliminary Hearing/Trial

2 Petitioner was represented by different attorneys at the preliminary hearing and the 3 trial, and contends that both were ineffective for failing to object to the admission of the 4 audiotape of the pretext call on the basis that it was not properly authenticated. Hab. Pet.
5 24. Petitioner argues that Deputy Freese could only hear Theresa C's side of the 6 conversation and therefore lacked personal knowledge to authenticate the contents of the 7 entire recording. Hab. Pet. 28. Even though Deputy Freese heard only one side of the 8 conversation, under California law his testimony was sufficient to authenticate the recording 9 so long as he could identify the tape as the same one on which he recorded the 10 conversation, and could testify that it was a complete recording of the conversation. See 11 People v. Estrada, 93 Cal. App. 3d 76, 100 (Cal. App.1. Dist. 1979); see also California 12 Evidence Code §§ 250, 1413. Moreover, the recording was admissible notwithstanding the 13 interruption in the tape when it was being turned over, as there was no showing that 14 material statements were missing from the conversation. Thus, any objection raised by 15 counsel would have been futile, therefore counsel's failure to raise the argument does not 16 constitute ineffective assistance. See Moermann, 628 F.3d at 1109-10 (citation omitted).

c. Appellate Counsel

18 Throughout his petition, petitioner argues that appellate counsel was ineffective for 19 failing adequately to raise the foregoing issues on appeal. Hab. Pet. 19, 24, 32, 45.

20 The Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment guarantees a criminal 21 defendant the effective assistance of counsel on his first appeal as of right. See Evitts v.
22 Lucey, 469 U.S. 387, 391-405 (1985). Claims of ineffective assistance of appellate counsel 23 are reviewed according to the standard set out in Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668
24 (1984). See Miller v. Keeney, 882 F.2d 1428, 1433 (9th Cir. 1989). Appellate counsel 25 does not have a constitutional duty to raise every nonfrivolous issue requested by 26 defendant. See Jones v. Barnes, 463 U.S. 745, 751-54 (1983). The weeding out of 27 weaker issues is widely recognized as one of the hallmarks of effective appellate advocacy.
28 Id. at 751-52.

1 For the reasons discussed, supra, petitioner was not denied the effective of 2 assistance of counsel during trial. Because the claims raised by petitioner lack merit, 3 appellate counsel's failure to raise them on appeal was neither deficient nor prejudicial 4 under the Strickland standard. See Rhoades v. Henry, 638 F.3d 1027, 1036 (9th Cir.
5 2011). Consequently, petitioner did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel on 6 appeal. The state court's decision denying relief on this claim was not objectively 7 unreasonable.

8 d. Conclusion

9 Based on the court's independent review of the record, the California Supreme 10 Court's decision denying petitioner's claims of ineffective assistance of counsel was not 11 objectively unreasonable. See Delgado, 223 F.3d at 982.

12 V. Appealability

13 The federal rules governing habeas cases brought by state prisoners require a 14 district court that denies a habeas petition to grant or deny a certificate of appealability 15 ("COA") in the ruling. See Rule 11(a), Rules Governing § 2254 Cases, 28 U.S.C. foll.
16 § 2254 (effective December 1, 2009).

17 To obtain a COA, petitioner must make "a substantial showing of the denial of a 18 constitutional right." 28 U.S.C. § 2253(c)(2). "Where a district court has rejected the 19 constitutional claims on the merits, the showing required to satisfy § 2253(c) is 20 straightforward: The petitioner must demonstrate that reasonable jurists would find the 21 district court's assessment of the constitutional claims debatable or wrong." See Slack v.
22 McDaniel, 529 U.S. 473, 484 (2000). Section 2253(c)(3) requires a court granting a COA
23 to indicate which issues satisfy the COA standard. Here, the court finds that two issues 24 presented by petitioner in his petition meet the above standard and accordingly GRANTS 25 the COA as to those issues. See generally Miller-El, 537 U.S. at 322.

26 The issues are:

27 (1) whether the trial court improperly admitted an audiotape of petitioner's 28 confession because the confession was coerced through an implied promise of leniency,

1 and;

2 (2) whether petitioner was entitled to a testimonial hearing to determine the 3 admissibility of his confession.

4 Accordingly, the clerk shall forward the file, including a copy of this order, to the 5 Court of Appeals. See Fed. R. App. P. 22(b); United States v. Asrar, 116 F.3d 1268, 1270
6 (9th Cir. 1997).

7 CONCLUSION

8 For the foregoing reasons, the petition for a writ of habeas corpus is DENIED.

9 A Certificate of Appealability is GRANTED. See Rule11(a) of the Rules Governing 10 Section 2254 Cases.

11 The clerk shall close the file.

12 IT IS SO ORDERED.

13 Dated: March 13, 2013.
